The distance of Mercury from the sun varies, owing to the eccentricity of its orbit. When he is nearest to the sun he receives ten and a half times more light and heat than we do, but when he removes to his greatest dis-tance the light and heat are reduced by more than one-half. Even then, however, the sun blazes in the skies of Mercury with a disc four and a half times larger-than that which he shows to us on earth.

A Voracious Bird.

The chaparral cock is a famous bird in Texas and some other Southwestern states, where it is known by various local names. It is a fierce-looking bird, about the size of a bantam rooster; has low and powerful legs and feet, a strong bill, three or four inches long, and is an exceedingly swift runner. According to the Texans, this bird eagerly hunts and eats centpedes, tarantulas and scorpions, and it also follows and destroys rattlesnakes in a peculiar way. Waiting un til the reptile is asleep in its coil, the bird drags branches of dry cactus, so as to completely surround the snake. Then the serper t is aroused by pushing a piece of four bottles of S.S.S. after having had much other treatment, and being at ment, and b of cactus against its skin, and it immedipass the thorny hedge, it turns at last in its blind rage to strike it elf, and thus dies of its own venom. The Dog Has No Mechanics.

In no well attested case has a dogshown any sense as to the nature of any mechanical contrivance. They will learn which way a door opens and rarely if ever do they undiscerningly close it when it is slightly ajar when they wish to pass through the opening, but I have never been able to observe or obtain evidence to show that they would pull down the latch in the way in which a cat readily learns to do. Much as dogs have had to do with guns, they display no kind of interest in tho arms except so far as they are tokens of sport to come. They connect the explosion with the capture of the game and will search for it in the direction in which the barrel was pointed. I have not, however, been able to find that they know, as they might readily do, when the weapon was loaded and when empty. They show no interest in it, such as monkeys readily display toward any mechanical contrivance to which their attention has been directed. All these negative features indicate that the mechanical side of the canine mind is entirely undeveloped.—Chience, New-
